Dean's Corner

Dean David E. Shipley

As this edition of The Kentucky Lawyer reaches you, some of the exuberant celebration generated by UK's NCAA Basketball Championship might have diminished. Even now, reminders of our championship season still are everywhere in Lexington and around the Commonwealth. UK flags fly from car windows, special magazines are sold at bookstores, "UK#1" often is seen in bold letters on signs in windows and painted on sidewalks, and sports writers worry about next year in column after column.

This has been an exciting year for UK. Whether or not you are a basketball fan, there have been many reasons for celebration including a very good year for the faculty, students, staff and alumni of your College of Law. Rick Pitino is proud of his "Untouchables" just as we should be very proud of the men and women featured in this edition of The Kentucky Lawyer.

When you read the features about Dennis Bricking '68, a champion to the poor in Kentucky, and Richard Burr III '73, a champion for the rights of men and women on death row, you will see some of the UK College of Law's impact in public service and in public interest law. Another champion of the public good, Allison Connelly '83, was presented the first Henry R. Heyburn Alumni Public Service Award this year.

The law school faculty is a true "championship team." You will be able to read about their top quality scholarship, their involvement in many projects throughout the state and beyond, and of the honors bestowed by the University on two of my colleagues—Professors Carolyn Bratt and Martin McMahon.

The College of Law has a championship student body. Our students are studying to become the next generation of champions for the legal profession. This magazine describes many of the activities our students engage in as preparation to join you as members of the Bar.

Finally, this issue celebrates the College's "Unforgettables"—our alumni. Study the dozens of entries in Class Notes to see what many of your fellow alumni are reporting. Please join all of us at the College of Law in congratulating the first six inductees into the Law Alumni Hall of Fame. They are wonderful examples of UK Law alumni and some of our greatest champions.

Whether we have to wait for the 1997 March Madness or another 18 years to celebrate UK's next national basketball championship, you can be assured that not a day goes by when you cannot celebrate another championship performance by the faculty, students, staff and alumni at your UK College of Law. ⚖️

BRICKING IS 'HEART AND SOUL' OF LEGAL AID SOCIETY

Like any attorney, Dennis Bricking ['68] has some clients who will never make his list of favorite people.

"It's not my place to like them," he says. "It's not a question of whether you like them, but a question of whether you can help them."

Bricking differs from his colleagues in private practice, however, in that he is precluded from representing people who can afford his services.

In fact, he can take only cases from individuals whose annual income—$8,000 a year for an unmarried adult with no dependents—puts them well below the poverty level. He also can represent social-services organizations set up to address the needs of the poor.

Bricking, a 53-year old transplant from Northern Kentucky, is executive director of the Legal Aid Society, an organization founded 74 years ago to provide assistance to poor people involved in civil matters.

He has been with Legal Aid, which serves 14 Central Kentucky counties from the Louisville headquarters, for 24 years. While he may not as yet set any records for longevity, Bricking's tenure has been unusual. Many young lawyers burn out and move to other areas of law or other professions after only a few years.

For Bricking—whose schedule also is jammed with commitments to other civic groups and social-service programs sponsored by the inner-city Roman Catholic church he attends—those two-and-a-half decades have passed in a blink.

"It seems like only five years. I have slipped into a role, even with its trials and tribulations, I am comfortable with."

Robert Ewald, a Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs partner and member of Legal Aid's board of directors, describes Bricking as the "heart and soul of the program. He is a very dedicated guy."

...Intense and committed are words used again and again as friends, associates—and sometimes adversaries—try to paint a verbal portrait of Bricking.

Judge Anne Shake, for example, says: "He has a dedication for the poor people of this community unlike anyone I have seen. That commitment shows in the way he lives and the professional choices he has made."

By: Rachael Kamuf
(Excerpts Reprinted with

First*, June 26, 1995)

Although he has mellowed somewhat with time, "Dennis has kept that idealism, that fire and vision that were a part of people who came of age in the '60s," says attorney Charles Zimmerman, who also serves on the Legal Aid board.

That makes him an outcast and target of mockery in some circles.

"We (Legal Aid nationwide) are a target because of issues we talk about. We happen to be effective advocates. Growers don't want us representing migrant workers. Some landlord groups don't want us helping tenants," Bricking says. "Equal access to justice is a redistribution of power. If our people get into court with a lawyer, they may win. Some people get upset about that."

"Equal access to justice is a redistribution of power. If our people get into court with a lawyer, they may win. Some people get upset about that."

... Bricking's social conscience was developed in a blue-collar Catholic neighborhood in Southgate, Ky. His father, who worked at General Electric Co.'s jet engine plant across the river in Cincinnati, and homemaker mother raised their children to do more with their lives than chase money.

"He is a person of faith," says David Richart, Kentucky Youth Advocates' executive director. "He does not proselytize. He acts on his religious beliefs."

... Bricking's first step toward the legal profession began after his 1961 high school graduation, when he left suburban Cincinnati to attend the University of Kentucky in Lexington. He majored in political science and went on to graduate from the UK College of Law in 1968.

By then married and a father, he considered a position as a staff attorney with an insurance company in Ohio. His other choice was to join a law firm in Lexington. Then, however, he learned about an opening in the new Jefferson County Juvenile Public Defender's office.

"The idea of doing things that have an impact was certainly stimulating and full of promise," Bricking says. "I was really impressed with the people here. They were good advocates."

Financially, entering private practice would have been more lucrative for Bricking. Yet the challenges he faced during two years in the juvenile program were more than enough compensation.

"There was always something new to keep me going," he recalls. "It is a very, very intense kind of work. You are dealing with so many kids from harsh backgrounds. . . kids with so little going for them. It opened my eyes to a world I didn't know existed. I grew up in a household that was average middle class. My life was normal. . . I had none of the problems these kids had."

Bricking began addressing some of the issues that brought him into contact with youthful offenders in 1971 when he joined Legal Aid as an attorney and community education director.

Legal Aid handles no criminal cases. In the civil arena, the agency—funded, in part, by federal, state and local governments—is restricted to helping indigent people, and nonprofit groups that assist them, in the areas of government, family law (including divorce proceedings), housing and civil and consumer rights.

Because of limited financial resources—the 1995 budget is $2.38 million—Legal Aid's 19 lawyers and 10 paralegals have to turn away clients. Bricking estimates that no more than 8 percent of the people who meet the eligibility requirements can be served, and that number could be cut in half if threatened cuts in federal allocations come to pass.

...Bricking agrees with welfare opponents who question the effectiveness of the current system and admits that some of the people that Legal Aid serves are behind in their rent, can't put food on the table or pay their electric bill because "they don't spend their money wisely. ... I don't believe people should get something for nothing forever. It is better for them to earn their money."

Nevertheless, he's also concerned that intolerance and bigotry are behind some calls to cut welfare, and that the result will be an even more polarized society.

"Our clients are at the butt end of all this. We know them as people trying to work through problems."

His attitude toward the poorest of the poor is Bricking's strongest attribute, Richart says.

"Dennis believes that other people's families are as important as his family, and he really acts that way," he says. "A lot of these families are nameless and faceless, but that doesn't mean that they aren't important. The Legal Aid attorneys defend them as though they are the most high-priced corporate clients, and that comes from him."

...For all that, though, Richart says Bricking won't be diverted from his life's work. "People don't realize that advocates like him are optimists—not pessimists. Although they might see flaws in the system, they believe that things can change for the better."

"People don't realize that advocates like him are optimists—not pessimists."

PROTECTING OF SOCIETY'S

THE RIGHTS UNFAVORED. . .

RICHARD H. BURR III

By: Suzanne K. Durham
Contributing Writer

(The following story is based on a telephone interview with Mr. Burr conducted in February 1996. At this writing, the court has decided McVeigh will be tried in Denver, but a trial date has not been set.)

On the 20th anniversary of his graduation from the UK College of Law, Richard H. Burr III '76 faces the career challenge of nearly a lifetime devoted to the rights of death-sentenced convicts.

Burr represents Timothy McVeigh, accused of detonating a diesel and fertilizer bomb in April 1995 at Oklahoma City's Murrah Federal Building and killing 167 people.

He was appointed to McVeigh's defense team in the spring of 1995 while he was Litigation Director at the Texas Appellate Practice and Educational Resource Center. Since his appointment, he has left the center and opened a private practice in Houston.

"Death cases are unique," says Burr, who has defended death-sentenced clients in various programs since 1979. "They allow the opportunity to really probe into why this human committed a murder. It requires us to look at every nuance of this person's life.

"That process makes you feel a great deal of compassion and helps give understanding, which diffuses the anger and the distance, and that is the part of the process that really engages me."

In McVeigh's case, Burr says that if guilt is established, "there is no question what the penalty will be unless we can change people's minds." Burr's challenge, if McVeigh is convicted, will be to determine "what might persuade people to not inflict the death penalty," to change the view that "condemnation and death are the proper result" upon conviction.

Burr's long history of protecting the rights of society's unfavored has its roots in the political activism of the early 1970s. As an undergraduate at Vanderbilt University, Burr was involved in antiwar protests where thousands would gather and march on campus and in Nashville.

When he graduated in 1971, Burr "came out of college committed to doing something to further the interests of poor and working people."

A couple of years later, that commitment brought him to law school at UK where he found a "diverse and interesting faculty." But two professors in particular spoke to his concerns.

"I came there with a long-standing history with the civil rights movement and I had a tremendous interest in civil rights, primarily for African Americans," Burr says. Law professor Robert Sedler "was able to make me see the way the law offers shelter to people who are oppressed." Sedler is currently a law professor at Wayne State University.

Burr's other significant teacher at UK was Professor Carolyn Bratt. "Like Sedler, her values drove her work and we shared very similar views of the world. She modeled how one can be a lawyer and care profoundly," Burr says. Bratt is still a law professor at UK and director of the Mineral Law Center.

As a first-year student, Burr helped start a chapter of the National Lawyer's Guild along with classmates Barbara Sutherland, Gary E. Johnson and Michael C. Davis among others. The group produced a video documentary about a coal strike in Harlan County, which had lasted for two years. They organized press conferences and community hearings in an effort to support the miners, Burr said.

As a third-year student, Burr was a regional vice president for the guild.

But what probably gave Burr his most profound educational experience was the involvement of Sedler in defending six witnesses subpoenaed to a Lexington grand jury investigating the whereabouts of Susan Saxe and Katherine Power in 1975.

"why is there hatred, why is there anger, why is there scapegoating"

Saxe and Power were under indictment for a 1970 Boston bank robbery in which a police officer was killed, and both were believed to have hidden in Lexington for a time under aliases. The six witnesses were found in contempt and jailed for not answering the grand jury's questions, and Burr's chapter of the National Lawyer's Guild encouraged Sedler to defend them.

Burr and others in the guild worked on the case with Sedler, who argued that jailing his clients was an abuse of the grand jury system, and that the FBI had used threatening and harassment techniques on his clients.

Sedler taught Burr "how you work through and keep your emotions and values in check while being the best advocate you can," Burr says.

In his first job out of law school, Burr represented women and African Americans in employment discrimination cases with a firm in Rochester, New York.

In 1979, Burr went to work for the Southern Prisoners' Defense Committee in Atlanta where he represented death-sentenced clients in state post-conviction and federal habeas corpus proceedings. "Getting into (death penalty litigation) was consistent with my goals as a lawyer," Burr says. "Almost immediately it became clear that people on death row in the South needed lawyers and there weren't any.

"We took it on ourselves to represent these people. The need was small then, but grew tremendously every day," Burr says.

In 1982, Burr, who grew up in Lake Wales, Florida, went to work as an assistant public defender in West Palm Beach, again representing death-sentenced clients in post-conviction and federal habeas corpus proceedings.

By 1987, he had moved to New York to be director of the Capital Punishment Project for the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund. He served as assistant counsel in most of the Fund's death penalty cases going before the U.S. Supreme Court. Burr consulted on more than 100 death penalty cases nationwide, and to death penalty resource centers in seven states.

Burr's appointment to the McVeigh case has challenged a lot of old notions for him. Up until a couple of years ago, he says, to be publicly associated with the far right would have been completely inconsistent with his life's work. McVeigh's case offers the challenge, however, to answer questions of "why is there hatred, why is there anger, why is there scapegoating" among factions of our society.

"Whatever led to this anger has its seeds in daily life in this country. If we just condemn, we have done nothing to understand it," Burr says. The challenge in McVeigh's case is to "transcend the hatred. Things are not what they appear to be. Our job is to say we understand, we have to understand, why it happened.

"We cry a lot for our clients and for the victims of our clients."

"Instead of stamping our feet and insisting that racists shouldn't exist, we have to find out why, what is it about this country that has led to this," Burr says.

More visible members of McVeigh's defense team have received a few threats, Burr says. He has not, and points out that the people of Oklahoma City have been courteous and cordial.

Burr has been accosted by victims' families in other death penalty cases and their anger is disconcerting. But he says he has never felt truly threatened because he understands they are hurting. "When I know the anger is coming from that source, I don't feel angry back, I understand," Burr says.

"We cry a lot for our clients and for the victims of our clients."

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY
COLLEGE OF LAW
HENRY R. HEYBURN ALUMNI
PUBLIC SERVICE AWARD

ALLISON INEZ CONNELLY
CLASS OF '83
JUNE 20 1996

Allison I. Connelly '83 was the recipient of the first Henry R. Heyburn Alumni Public Service Award at the College of Law's Alumni/Faculty/Student Awards Banquet during the Kentucky Bar Convention in Lexington in June.

The Henry R. Heyburn Student and Alumni Public Service Award Fund was established by U.S. District Judge, John G. Heyburn II '76 of Louisville in memory of his father, a prominent Jefferson County attorney. Nominations were received from alumni nationwide seeking to honor the graduate of the UK College of Law who has best distinguished the College and the profession with his/her public service.

Connelly is a 1980 Political Science graduate of the University of Kentucky and a member of the College of Law's Class of 1983. While in law school, she received the American Jurisprudence Book Award for Civil Procedure and the American Jurisprudence Book Award for Torts I. Ms. Connelly is also a graduate of the National Criminal Defense College of Mercer Law School in 1989.

Her public service career began as a staff attorney at the Northpoint Trial/Post-Conviction Office in Burgin, KY where she became the Directing Attorney of that office. In 1989 she assumed the post of Assistant Public Advocate Manager, supervising four state-wide post-conviction and trial field offices. In July of 1992, she became the first woman Public Advocate for the Commonwealth of Kentucky. She now administers Kentucky's state-wide public defender program and oversees the delivery of legal services to over 100,000 needy individuals accused or convicted of crimes.

Since 1986, Connelly has served the College of Law as an adjunct instructor for courses in Litigation Skills, Criminal Procedure, Criminal Trial Process, and Legal Writing. ⚖️

UK LAW GRADUATE
CO-HOSTS BENEFIT

Stephen B. Bright '74, Director of the Southern Center for Human Rights and J. Skelly Wright Fellow at Yale Law School, served as co-host when the Southern Center for Human Rights celebrated its 20th anniversary with a benefit dinner this June at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, DC.

The Center presented its Equal Justice Award to the Honorable A. Leon Higginbotham, chief Judge Emeritus, U.S. Court of Appeals, Third Circuit and its Service to Prisoners Award to Alvin J. Bronstein, outgoing executive Director of the ACLU National Prison Project.

Along with Bright, the benefit was hosted by Charles J. Ogletree, Center chairman and Director of the Criminal Justice Institute at Harvard Law School and Angela Jordan Davis, former executive director of the national Rainbow Coalition.

The Center has played a role in criminal justice and corrections issues throughout its 20 year existence and is involved in grass roots efforts to improve criminal justice and corrections systems of the South, as well as a wide range of public education efforts.

H. WENDELL
CHERRY '58

Wendell Cherry, co-founder of Humana Inc. served for 30 years as the company's president and chief operating officer prior to his death in 1989.

Born September 25, 1935 in Warren County, KY, Cherry earned bachelor's and law degrees from the University of Kentucky graduating first in his class at law school where he was editor-in-chief of the Kentucky Law Journal.

In 1959, he joined the Louisville law firm of Wyatt, Grafton & Sloss and began teaching economics at the University of Louisville. The following year he met David Jones, who would become his partner in business and civic activities throughout the remainder of his life.

Cherry was also co-owner and president of the Kentucky Colonels team in the American Basketball Association and served as the Association's president. As a result of his many business and civic successes, he was chosen as one of America's 10 Outstanding Young Men of 1970 by the U.S. Jaycees.

Wendell Cherry was the father of fundraising at the UK College of Law. Through his major matching gift challenge three endowed professorships were established that included the Dorothy Salmon Endowed Professorship, the William T. Lafferty Endowed Professorship, and the H. Wendell Cherry Endowed Professorship.

JENNIFER B.
COFFMAN '78

Quoted in the Lexington Herald-Leader as saying she would strive to give everyone an "equal playing field," Jennifer Coffman was sworn in as Kentucky's first female federal judge in 1993.

Born in Western Kentucky and a graduate of Fulton County High School, Coffman holds an undergraduate degree in English from the University of Kentucky along with an M.S. in Library Science and a J.D. from the College of Law in 1978. She has served as a member of the College's Visiting Committee, a Director of the Law Alumni Association and a speaker and resource to law students.

From 1982 until 1992, Judge Coffman was a partner with the firm of Brooks, Coffman & Fitzpatrick in Lexington. In 1992, she became a partner in the Lexington firm of Newberry, Hargrove & Rambicure where she practiced until her nomination and selection to the federal bench in 1993. She replaced the Hon. Eugene Siler, who in 1991 moved to the federal appeals court.

Judge Coffman makes her home in Lexington with her husband, dentist Wesley Coffman and their two children, Will and Blair.

BERT THOMAS
COMBS '37

Bert Combs was born in Clay County on December 8, 1911 and attended the University of Kentucky. With his graduation as second in his UK law school class of 1937, he began a life of service to the people of Kentucky.

Combs began his law practice in Manchester and later moved it to Prestonsburg. In 1942 he entered the U.S. Army as a private and assisted in the investigation and prosecution of Japanese war criminals. He was awarded the Bronze Star and Medal of Honor for his service.

Returning back to his beloved mountains in the early 50's, Bert Combs received his appointment to fill a vacancy on the Court of Appeals and defeated Governor Simeon Willis to be elected Judge of the Court of Appeals in 1951.

In 1955 he resigned the court for a failed run for governor, returning triumphantly in 1959 to win the governorship. After his tenure as Governor, he was appointed as circuit judge for the U.S. Court of Appeals, resigning in 1971.

Probably best known for his fight for educational equality (the beginning of KERA), one of Governor Combs' true loves was education. He remained close to UK and his law school throughout his life. Serving as a member of the College's visiting committee and a trusted advisor, Bert Combs is memorialized at the College of Law with a $1 million endowment established by alumni and friends in his name.

ROBERT GENE LAWSON '63

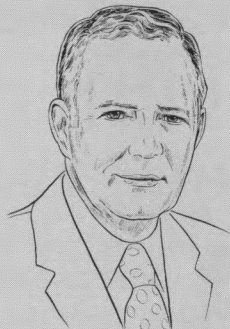

Often heard in courtrooms throughout the Commonwealth is the phrase, "According to Lawson." Judges and attorneys alike acknowledge Bob Lawson as THE authority on Kentucky rules of evidence.

Born in West Virginia on July 15, 1938, Bob Lawson attended Berea College and Tulane University in New Orleans before obtaining his J.D. at UK in 1963. Lawson was editor-in-chief of the Kentucky Law Journal and graduated Order of the Coif.

Beginning his career as an attorney for the American Electric Power System, Lawson soon returned to Lexington to practice as an associate with the firm of Eblen, Howard, & Milner.

In 1966, Bob Lawson's true calling became apparent as he joined the UK Law faculty receiving tenure in 1969. In the summer of 1971, then UK President Otis Singletary appointed Bob Lawson Acting Dean of the College of Law. Declining to be considered for the position on a permanent basis, he served for a period of two years.

From 1973 until 1982 he taught hundreds of UK law students, only to be named once again to assume the deanship which he held from 1982 until 1987. Most recently Professor Lawson has returned to the College after a one and a half year assignment as Special Assistant to UK President Charles Wethington, Jr.

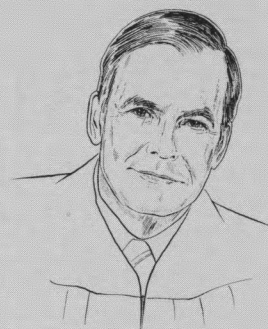

WILLIAM L. MATTHEWS '41

Best known as "a Kentuckian by birth, a product of the state's system of higher education, a devoted servant of the University of Kentucky and its College of Law, a distinguished teacher of law students for four decades, a man whose dedication to knowledge touched and influenced the lives of thousands of young people—" W.L. Matthews truly deserves this induction into the College of Law's Alumni Hall of Fame.

Dean Matthews taught at the College of Law from 1946 through 1984, serving as Dean of the College from 1951 to 1952 and from 1956 until 1971. He held the additional honor of Alumni Professor for the ten-year period 1974-1984.

The "Matthews Era" was a period of marked achievement for the College—a new law building, a highly qualified student body, an expanding library collection, and much more. During his 17 years as dean, he strived for institutional quality across the board, but expended his best efforts on what he knew counted the most—developing a faculty of diversity, exceptional quality, and unbending commitment.

Today, hundreds of UK Law alumni across the Commonwealth and the nation acknowledge W.L. Matthews as one of the law school's very best professors and also as a truly good and kind man.

ROBERT F. STEPHENS '51

The Hon. Robert F. Stephens was appointed to the Kentucky Supreme Court in 1979 and became its Chief Justice in 1982.

Bob Stephens was born in Covington, Kentucky and received his undergraduate degree from Indiana University, and followed by a UK law degree in 1951. After graduation, he worked as a law clerk for the Kentucky Court of Appeals and then served as County Judge of Fayette County. It was during this time that Stephens was instrumental in bringing about the merger of city and county governments for Lexington and Fayette County.

While serving as state's Attorney General, Bob Stephens was President of the Southern Conference of Attorney Generals. And that was only the beginning of his many professional and civic activities.

Chief Justice Stephens is a former fundraising chair for the Kentucky Heart Association, former state chair of the Arthritis Fund, former President of the Kentucky County Judges Association, 1984 recipient of the Herbert Harley Award, President of the National Conference of Chief Justices, and in 1986 was selected by the membership of the KBA as Kentucky's Outstanding Judge. He has remained close to his University and his law school as a former trustee of the UK Alumni Association and as an adjunct instructor at UK Law.

UK College of Law
Alumni Hall of Fame
Criteria and Nomination Form

Nominations are now being accepted for the UK College of Law's Alumni Hall of Fame. This program will honor up to three alumni annually, and inductions will take place at the College's awards banquet during the KBA convention in June. All nominations will be carefully considered by the board of directors of the Law Alumni Association. Please consider the following criteria when nominating an alumnus.

- A. Candidates must have earned a law degree from the University of Kentucky not less than 10 years prior to consideration. Candidates may not be active board members of the Law Alumni Association, and cannot at the time of nomination or selection be the holder of an elected partisan political office.
- B. To be selected for the Hall, a candidate must meet the following criteria:
 - Candidate must have reached and remained at the pinnacle of his or her field for a period of time sufficient to demonstrate perseverance and maturation and/or must have effected a profound positive influence on the College of Law in the years since his or her graduation.
 - Candidate must be recognized by his or her peers as having reached and remained at the pinnacle of his or her field and/or having a profound positive influence on the College of Law.
 - Professional success and significant contributions to a specialty are not achievement enough to warrant nomination to the Alumni Hall of Fame.
- C. The honor of distinguished alumnus is not given so much in recognition of an office or position held, but rather for the actual merit of the individual's work in his or her chosen field of endeavor and professional leadership. Candidates must have exhibited a high degree of character and integrity.
- D. Evidence for meeting the above criteria can come from detailed information about the candidate's credentials, achievements, the impact and implications of those accomplishments, public awards and honors, and outside sources such as published articles and previously aired video or audio tapes. The selection committee considers all information included with nominations in making their decisions.
- E. All candidates, living and deceased, will be considered regardless of race, gender or religion.

For more information, call Deborah A. Wells at 606/257-3208. Nominations for the 1997 Awards will be accepted until March 1, 1997. Send your nomination materials with the completed nomination form to: College of Law Hall of Fame, 201 Law Building, University of Kentucky, Lexington, KY 40506-0048. Forms may be faxed to 606/323-1061, or submitted by E-mail from <http://www.uky.edu/Law/letter.htm>.

1997 College of Law Alumni Hall of Fame CALL FOR NOMINATIONS

The Alumni Hall of Fame is the highest recognition presented by the UK Law Alumni Association. It shall be awarded with great care to alumni who have distinguished themselves by contributions that they have made in their own particular field of work, or in the betterment of humanity.

All nominations should be addressed to the Alumni Hall of Fame, 201 Law Building, University of Kentucky, Lexington, KY, 40506-0048. Deadline for nominations is March 1, 1997.

Rufus Lisle '32 was honored with the Citizen-Lawyer Award by the Fayette County Bar Association in March of this year. The Citizen-Lawyer Award is given to a member of the Fayette County Bar Association who "has demonstrated a sincere desire to maintain and improve the administration of justice, the quality of legal practice and the quality of life for all residents of Fayette County."

Dees '35

Harry P. Dees '35 writes he is still practicing law after 60 years in Evansville, Indiana. He has served as President of the Evansville

Bar Association and of the Evansville Rotary Club during that time. He has completed a history of his law firm, Kahn, Dees, Donovan & Kahn that includes his successful argument before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Paul Oberst '39 celebrates 50 years on the faculty at the UK College of Law this year. After service to our country, he began teaching law at UK in 1946. He has been Professor Emeritus since 1982 and still maintains an office at the law school.

Robert F. Houlihan '41 received the Henry T. Duncan Award from the Fayette County Bar Association. He is with Stoll, Keenon & Park's Lexington office.

Dear Alumni and Friends:

When Dean Shipley asked me to assume the office of President of the Law Alumni Association, I did so with a great deal of pride. For several years I have been active on the Association's Board of Directors and watched our group grow to over 500 members. This past year we also celebrated our new affiliation with the UK Alumni Association.

Your membership in the Law Alumni Association supports law school class reunions and alumni events such as our Homecoming Tent party. It gives Dean Shipley those most important discretionary funds to use for our alumni efforts. And beginning this year, your $30 paid annual membership dues provide you free tickets to the College of Law's annual awards ceremony during the KBA convention. The way I look at it, it appears to be a very good return on a mere $30 investment.

The primary reason to join the Law Alumni Association is loyalty to UK and to our law school. When you remember the friends you made, the education you received and the memories all of us treasure, it only makes sense to become a member.

If you have not joined, or if it is time for you to renew your membership, please do not hesitate to contact our Association Secretary, Julie Dunn, at 606/257-3103.

I look forward to seeing you at Law Alumni Association events throughout the year.

Sincerely,

Ron L. Walker '87
President

UNRAVELING THE MYSTERY OF MEMBERSHIP IN THE LAW ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

When the Law Alumni Association became an affiliate member of the UK Alumni Association, we confused many of our graduates. Our purpose in becoming an affiliate member of UK's Alumni Association was to encourage more College of Law alumni to become members and to increase the services and value of your membership dues dollar.

As a graduate of the UK College of Law, you can become a member of EITHER the Law Alumni Association OR the UK Alumni Association or BOTH! Your membership in one organization does not afford you membership in the other. As a LIFE member of the UK Alumni Association, you must either pay annual dues to the Law Alumni Association or become a LIFE member of the Law Alumni Association in order to be a part of that group.

We sincerely hope you will support the Law Alumni Association with your membership and also support the University's alumni efforts through an additional membership in the UK Alumni Association.

For membership in either OR both organizations, please fill out the form below and mail to: UK College of Law Alumni Office, 226 Law Building, Lexington, KY 40506-0048.

GREAT TEACHERS—

The University of Kentucky—on its Lexington campus, at its Medical Center and throughout the Commonwealth in its community colleges—is blessed with over 2,900 teachers. Some are in their first year of teaching at a major research institution, others are finishing out a career that has spanned decades, and most are working diligently every day of the year to offer the best education to UK's 67,977 students.

How then does the UK Alumni Association begin to choose only five professors each year to honor as "Great Teachers?"

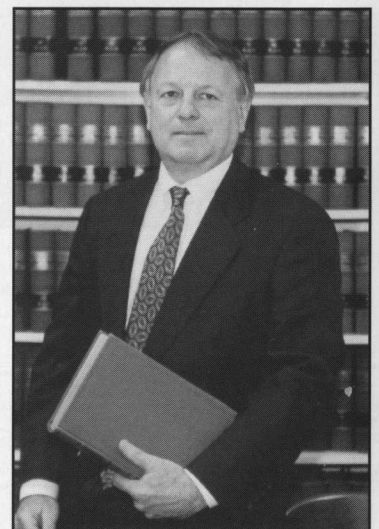

Every year a committee meets to examine the dozens of nominations submitted by students, campus organizations and individuals and to decide who will be honored as "Great Teachers" for that year. The criteria includes knowledge of subject matter and research; demonstrated innovative methods of presentation; interest and involvement with UK students; involvement in student activities; contributions to the campus; and special awards and recognition.

This year for the seventh time since 1962, a UK College of Law professor has been honored as one of UK's "Great Teachers of 1996."

Martin J. McMahon, Jr., Laramie L. Leatherman Professor of Law, was honored at a luncheon sponsored by the UK Alumni Association in April. Along with four other UK professors, Professor McMahon was presented this honor by UK President Charles Wethington, Jr.

Professor McMahon is a nationally known tax expert whose books on taxation are widely used at law schools throughout the country. [See Faculty Briefs, p.34 for more information on Professor McMahon's accomplishments] A much sought after speaker on tax law education and practice, Professor McMahon has recently completed a stint as an instructor in the New York University/Internal Revenue Service Continuing Professional Education Program in Washington, DC. As a faculty adviser to the Kentucky Law Journal, Professor McMahon is well known for his great regard for his students and his unselfish donation of his time and expertise.

McMahon joins Professors Richardson, Bratt and Graham and former Deans Matthews, Lawson and Campbell in the ranks of 'Great Teachers' from this law school. ⚖️

BRATT RECEIVES WILLIAM LYONS AWARD FOR OUTSTANDING SERVICE

Professor Carolyn S. Bratt was honored on April 29 with the William E. (Bill) Lyons Award for Outstanding Service. The Award is given each year by The Martin School of Public Policy & Administration at UK.

The William E. (Bill) Lyons Award for Outstanding Service to the campus, community, and state is given annually to an individual associated with the University who has made outstanding service contributions to the University, the Lexington community, and/or the Commonwealth of Kentucky. It is named in honor of the late William E. Lyons, Professor of Political Science and Public Administration, who served as Director of the Martin School of Public Policy and Administration.

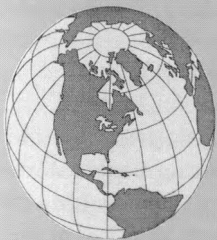

Professor Bratt has been a member of the College of Law faculty since 1975 and was named the W.L. Matthews Professor of Law in 1989. She has received three awards for outstanding teaching at the law school and was chosen as one of the University's Great Teacher Award recipients in 1985.

In addition to her membership on the University Senate Council, Professor Bratt has chaired the Council as well as chaired and served on numerous committees of the Senate. A tireless advocate for women's rights, she has chaired the Senate Ad Hoc Committee on the Status on Women since 1987. Beyond her service to the University, Professor Bratt has worked in the local community and the state with neighborhoods, developers, and the Urban County Council on issues of zoning and community planning. She has actively promoted women's rights not only at UK but throughout the state, serving as a member of the Kentucky Commission on Women.

FACULTY HANDS ACROSS THE OCEAN

By: Associate Professor Roberta Harding

What do some British and Kentucky law students have in common? The answer: the opportunity to be taught by the same faculty. The UK College of Law has established a faculty exchange program with the Coventry University School of International Studies and Law. The program enables law professors from these institutions to visit the other institution in order to teach a course or courses; conduct research; and/or team teach the comparative law portion of a course.

The increased globalization of the practice of law provided the impetus for the creation of the program. Today's law student needs some exposure to international and comparative aspects of legal principles. The College of Law believes that the faculty exchange program is an excellent way to accomplish this task. For example, by having an opportunity to be taught by visiting faculty members from Coventry School of Law, UK law students will receive first hand knowledge about the comparative legal dimensions of substantive areas, such as Business Associations, Human Rights, and Environmental Law. In addition, the members of the College of Law faculty who visit Coventry will be able to enhance their knowledge by teaching and researching at Coventry. Ultimately, the College of Law students will be the recipients of the benefits of the faculty's international experience.

Several faculty members have already expressed an interest in being among the initial participants. They include Professors Healy, Weinberg, Stipanowich, Davis and Campbell.

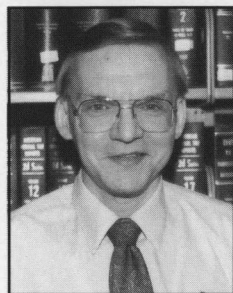

Richard C. Ausness, Ashland Oil Professor of Law, will have his article, "Learned Intermediaries and Sophisticated Users: Encouraging the Use of Intermediaries to Transmit Product Safety Information," published shortly in The Syracuse Law Review. Another article, "The Case for a 'Strong' Regulatory Compliance Defense," will appear in a symposium issue on tort reform published by The Maryland Law Review.

Drusilla V. Bakert, Associate Dean, is now working in the areas of admissions, scholarships and student affairs. She was one of twenty-nine career services professionals nationwide who were interviewed for, and quoted in, Guerilla Tactics for Getting the Legal Job of Your Dreams: The Best Strategies from the Country's Most Innovative Law School Career Advisors, Kimm Walton, Harcourt Brace Legal and Professional Publications, Inc. (1995).

Carolyn S. Bratt, W.L. Matthews Professor of Law, coordinated the forthcoming symposium issue of the Kentucky Law Journal that celebrates the seventy-fifth anniversary of women's right to vote (1920) and the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the issuance of the "Declaration of Sentiments" by the 1848 Seneca Falls Conference, the first women's rights convention in the United States. Professor Bratt contributed (with Scollay) an article to the symposium issue called "Reflections on the Limitations of Rational Discourse, Empirical Data and Legal Mandates as Tools for the Achievement of Gender Equity in Higher Education," 84 Ky.L.J. ____ (1996). Professor Bratt was the co-principal investigator with Tickamyer and Scollay on "Gender Differences Among Members of Colleges and University Governing Boards," a final report on a study of two hundred governing boards of institutions of higher education funded by the Robert L. Gale Fund of the Association of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges. She was appointed this year to the Board of the Mary W. Wharton Nature Sanctuary at Floracliff, Kentucky and served on the Government Leadership Team of New Century Lexington. Professor Bratt was involved in developing a mediation program for resolving land use disputes for the Lexington Fayette Government and testified before the Kentucky General Assembly on behalf of successful pay equity legislation for state employees.

Ruthford B Campbell, Jr., Alumni Professor of Law had his article, "Resales of Securities Under the Securities Act of 1933" published at 52 Washington & Lee Law Review 1333 (1995). Professor Campbell also appeared before the Telecommunications Subcommittee of the Commerce Committee of the United States House of Representatives in December of 1995 to give testimony on the Capital Markets Bill. This testimony resulted from a previously published law review article, "An Open Attack on the Nonsense of State Blue Sky Law," 10 Journal of Corporation Law 553 (1985) advocating the pre-emption by Congress of all state blue sky laws, a position essentially adopted by the Capital Markets Bill. Professor Campbell was selected by the Class of 1996 to deliver remarks on behalf of the faculty at this year's graduation ceremony.

Herb Cihak, Associate Professor of Law and Director of the Law Library, had his article "Marketing and Libraries: An Inevitable Alliance" published in the Autumn 1995 Kentucky Libraries and his article "Reaching Through Teaching" appeared in the January/February 1996 edition of Marketing Library Services. Professor Cihak made a presentation in October, 1995 in Paducah to the Joint Conference of the Kentucky Library Association and the Kentucky School Media Association on "Creative Marketing for Libraries." He was also the driving force in the creation of the UK/CLE program entitled "Kentucky Lawyers Online: The Internet and the Practice of Law" presented in Lexington, Prestonsburg and Bowling Green.

Mary J. Davis, Associate Professor of Law, wrote several chapters and otherwise collaborated with the authors of Owen, Montgomery and Keeton, Products Liability and Safety: Cases and Materials (3d ed. 1996). She also co-authored Products Liability Problems and the 1996 Statutory Supplement for use with Products Liability and Safety. Her article, "The Supreme Court and Our Culture of Irresponsibility," will be published in The Wake Forest Law Review in December 1996. She, along with the Trial Advocacy Board she advises, organized and hosted the National Trial Competition Region VI qualifying round in February 1996 in Lexington. Twenty teams from ten law schools in Ohio, Michigan, and Kentucky conducted mock trials during the three-day event. She is currently working on an article which explores the regulatory effectiveness of the Consumer Product Safety Commission over the last 25 years.

Todd B. Eberle, Associate Dean and Director of Continuing Legal Education, made a presentation in January to the 1996 Mid-Year Meeting of the Association for Continuing Legal Education (ACLE) in San Antonio, TX entitled, "The Small CLE Operation: Maximizing Your Creativity and Resources To Achieve Your Goals." He also chaired a roundtable discussion on "Increasing Revenues and Controlling Costs" at the same meeting. A past president of ACLE, he remains active as chair of their By-Laws Committee, member of the Nominations and Long Range Planning

Standing Committees, and was recently appointed to an Ad Hoc Committee on Elections. Eberle continues as Editor of Continuing Legal Education: The Handbook of the CLE Profession. Dean Eberle was reappointed to the boards of directors of both Central Kentucky Legal Services, Inc., and the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund of Kentucky, as well as serving on the Advisory Group to the statewide Access to Justice Foundation.

William H. Fortune, Edward T. Breathitt Professor of Law, has made CLE presentations to the 1995 and 1996 KBA annual conventions, the Internal Revenue Service, UK/CLE Domestic Relations session and the UK College of Nursing. He has also participated in a number of mediations for the Mediation Center of Kentucky. His book Litigation Ethics, co-authored with Professors Underwood and Imwinkelried, will be published this summer and he has works in progress on "Kentucky Criminal Law" with Professor Lawson and on "Psychology and the Legal System" with Professors Nietzel and Wrightsman.

Eugene R. Gaetke, Wendell Cherry Professor of Law and Associate Dean for Academic Affairs, served as moderator and prepared the discussion paper for the professional values session of the KBA's Conclave in August. The two-day conference of Kentucky practitioners, judges and professors made proposals for strengthening the teaching of professional skills and values at the three Kentucky law schools.

Darlene C. Goring, Assistant Professor of Law, will have her first article, "Silent Beneficiaries: Affirmative Action and Gender in Law School Academic Support Programs," published in an upcoming symposium Kentucky Law

Journal relating to issues of gender, race and class. She made a presentation with Dean David Shipley and Professor Louise Graham on academic support programs in law schools before the Kentucky Symposium on Recruitment, Retention and Graduation of African-American Graduate and Professional Students. Professor Goring developed and taught a one-week summer program for "at risk" first-year students entitled "Introduction to Legal Reasoning." In 1995-96 she coached the Trial Advocacy Board's Association of Trial Lawyers of America competition team.

Alvin L. Goldman, Dorothy Salmon Professor of Law, together with Matthew Finkin of Illinois and Clyde Summers of Pennsylvania, published the second edition of their casebook, Legal Protection for the Individual Employee in December 1995. Professor Goldman's treatise Labor and Employment Law in the United States was issued by Kluwer Publishing in Spring 1996. He is updating and redrafting his book chapter on the resolution of interests disputes, and in February prepared his annual contributions as U.S. co-reporter for International Labor Law Reports. Professor Goldman attended the annual meeting of the National Academy of Arbitrators in Toronto and will be attending the World Law Conference in Brussels in September. He continues as an Executive Committee member of the Labor Law Group, a member of the Board of Governors of the National Academy of Arbitrators, Vice Chair of the U.S. Branch of the International Society for Labor Law, and on the advisory board for the World Law Conference.

Louise Graham, Willburt Ham Professor of Law, recently completed an article entitled "A False Public Sentiment: Narrative and Visual Images of Women Lawyers in Film." The article was co-written with Dr. Gerald Maschio from the UK Fine Arts Department and will be included in a forthcoming symposium to be published by the Kentucky Law Journal. Professor Graham has recently completed a court development project with the Administrative Office of the Courts. She presented her work on that project, "Protecting Kentucky Children's Rights to Permanent, Stable Homes: A Review of Kentucky Statutes" to a state-wide multi-disciplinary panel in February. Professor Graham taught Children and The Law for the first time in Spring Semester 1996, and beginning this summer she and Judge James E. Keller '66 will be developing the second edition of their treatise, Kentucky Domestic Relations. Professor Graham also served this year on UK's NCAA self-study committee.

Roberta M. Harding, Associate Professor of Law, had her article "Celluloid Death: Cinematic Depictions of Capital Punishment" published in a special symposium issue on law and film in The University of San Francisco Law Review (1996). Her article, "The Gallows to the Gurney: Analyzing the (Un)constitutionality of the Methods of Execution" was published in a symposium issue on criminal law at 6 Boston University Public Interest Law Journal (1996), and her article, "At Loggerheads: The Supreme Court and Racial Equality in Public School Education after Missouri v. Jenkins," was published in the Washington & Lee Race, Ethnicity and Ancestry Law Digest (1996). Professor Harding participated in a symposium on civil rights at Washington & Lee University School of Law in February. She made two presentations—one on "American Civil Rights" and the other on "The Rights of American Prisoners"—at Coventry University School of International Studies and Law, Coventry, England in March, and made a presentation on "Capital Punishment in Kentucky and the United States" to Amnesty International in Lexington. While visiting Coventry University School of Law in Coventry, England, to finalize details for a faculty exchange program with the law school, she assisted Dr. Roger Hood, All Soul's College, Oxford University, Oxford, England with revising the American law sections on the latest edition of his book The Death Penalty: A World-wide Perspective. Professor Harding was appointed by Mayor Pam Miller to the Mayor's Commission of Privatization and represented Dean Shipley on the Kentucky Public Advocacy Commission. She continues as an editor of legal manuscripts for Little, Brown & Co.

Michael P. Healy, Associate Professor of Law, completed his final report for the Administrative Conference of the United States analyzing the fairness and effectiveness of the judicial review preclusion provision of the Superfund Statute. Professor Healy has drafted an abbreviated version of his report, which is being published as a law review article. That article, entitled "The Effectiveness and Fairness of Superfund's Judicial Review Preclusion Provision," will be published in volume 15 of the Virginia Environmental Law Journal. Professor Healy also has written an article that will be included in a symposium on statutory interpretation and environmental law being published by the NYU Environmental Law Journal. That article is entitled "The Allure and Limits of Textualism: The Supreme Court Decision in PUD No. 1 of Jefferson County v. Washington Dep't of Ecology." Professor Healy is now continuing work on an article that will examine the scope of citizen suit actions that can be brought alleging violations of emissions standards or limits under the Clean Water Act. He also has agreed to prepare a review of a book entitled Enforcement at the EPA: High Stakes and Hard Choices (1995), by Joel A. Mintz.

Martin J. McMahon, Jr., Laramie L. Leatherman Professor of Law, published new editions of two casebooks this year, Federal Income Taxation of Partnerships and S Corporations, Second Edition (Foundation Press) with P. McDaniel, H. Ault & D. Simmons and Federal Income Taxation of Business Organizations, Second Edition (Foundation Press) with P. McDaniel, H. Ault and D. Simmons, as well as a first edition of another casebook, Federal Income Taxation of Corporations (Foundation Press) with P. McDaniel, H. Ault and D. Simmons. Professor McMahon also published a new edition of Federal Income Taxation of Individuals Study Problems, Second Edition (Warren Gorham & Lamont) and an accompanying Teacher's Manual with L. Zelenak. In addition, he published two semi-annual Supplements to the treatise that he coauthored with Professor Boris Bittker, Federal Income Taxation of Individuals, Second Edition and the annual cumulative supplement to his casebook, Federal Income Taxation, Cases and Materials, Third Edition (Foundation Press) with P. McDaniel, H. Ault, and D. Simmons. Professor McMahon was a speaker on "Current Developments" at the University of Texas School of Law's 43rd Annual Taxation Conference in Austin, Texas in December and made two presentations at the Midyear Meeting of the Tax Section of the ABA held in New Orleans in January. For 1996, Professor McMahon is the Chair of the Tax Section of the AALS and the Program Planning Subcommittee Chair for the Teaching Taxation Committee of the ABA Section on Taxation.

Douglas C. Michael, Associate Professor of Law, will be publishing his article titled "Cooperative Implementation of Federal Regulation" in the next issue of The Yale Journal on Regulation. He has signed a contract with West Publishing Co. for his casebook on Legal Accounting. Professor Michael participated in this year's National Conference of Law Reviews, hosted by the College's journals, by preparing a review of the literature on student-edited law reviews and hosting a panel discussing alternative citation manuals. He continued this year as faculty advisor to the Kentucky Law Journal.

Kathryn L. Moore, Assistant Professor of Law, will have her first article, "State and Local Taxation of Interstate and Foreign Commerce, The Second Best Solution" published in Volume 42:3 of the Wayne Law Review. She expects to complete work on her second article, "State and Local Taxation, When Will Congress Intervene?" early this summer.

John M. Rogers, Brown, Todd & Heyburn Professor of Law, recently judged the final round of the Seventeenth Annual National Administrative Law Competition along with Justice Myra Selby of the Indiana Supreme Court and Ohio U.S. District Judge Walter Rice. Professor Rogers' article on "Issue Voting by Multi-member Appellate Courts" appeared in the May 1996 issue of the Vanderbilt Law Journal. In January as part of the Randall-Park Colloquium Series, Professor Rogers presented a paper on "U.S. Supreme Court Decisions Against the Backdrop of Binding Customary International Law."

Paul Salamanca, Assistant Professor of Law, is at work on articles concerning the religion clauses of the first amendment and the right to privacy in an era of judicial inactivism. He participated in a panel discussion at this summer's KBA Convention entitled "First Amendment Issues - From the Right to Privacy to Separation of Church and State - There's a Reason it is the First Amendment." He has also participated in discussions about the religion clauses with students at the Lexington Theological Seminary as part of a course there on religion and politics.

Robert G. Schwemm, Ashland Oil Professor of Law, recently published an article on "Housing Discrimination and the Appraisal Industry" in a book entitled Mortgage Lending, Racial Discrimination, and Federal Policy (Urban Institute Press, Washington, DC). In the Spring 1996 semester, Professor Schwemm taught at the John Marshall Law School in Chicago, and cumulative sales of his book, Housing Discrimination: Law and Litigation (Clark Boardman Callaghan) exceeded the half million dollar mark. During the past year he gave speeches on fair housing and lending discrimination in Houston, Portland, Chicago, Richmond and Philadelphia. In June, 1996, he was the moderator-facilitator for the eighth straight year at the annual convention of the National Fair Housing Alliance.

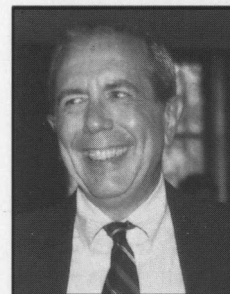

David E. Shipley, Dean of the College of Law and Professor of Law, served as a planner, presenter, moderator, discussion leader, and participant in the KBA's Legal Education Conclave, "Our Common Future—Legal Education and Professional Development for the 21st Century." He wrote a paper and made a presentation on "Copyright Law and Libraries in Cyberspace" for the Kentucky Library Association and the Kentucky School Media Association. In October, he was the keynote speaker at the fall initiation banquet for "Societus Pro Legibus," a prelaw organization at UK.

Thomas J. Stipanowich, W.L. Matthews Professor of Law, was recently appointed as one of four public members of the Securities Industry Conference on Arbitration (SICA), the body which establishes general arbitration policy and rules for the U.S. securities industry, and was also elected a fellow of the American College of Construction Lawyers. He was UK's nominee and a national finalist in the ACE (American Council on Education) Fellowship Competition, but withdrew for family reasons—specifically, his December marriage to Sarah (Sky) Yancey of Lexington. As a member of the American Arbitration Association Construction ADR Task Force, he helped reform AAA policies and procedures. His article, "Beyond Arbitration: Innovation and Evolution in the U.S. Construction Industry," recently appeared in the Business Law Symposium Issue of the Wake Forest Law Review. He is Editor of The Construction Lawyer, the journal of the ABA Forum on the Construction Industry and was recently named to the editorial advisory board of The International Construction Law Review. He is currently revising an article on the history and future of construction law. The second supplement to the award-winning treatise Federal Arbitration Law: Agreements, Awards and Remedies, co-authored with Macneil and Speidel, will soon be published by Little, Brown & Co. Professor Stipanowich also continues to serve as a court-appointed neutral for the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Kentucky. Two opinions which he rendered as Special Master for the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District in L. K. Comstock v. Becon, Inc. are currently being published in the Federal Supplement. Recent major presentations: "Beyond Arbitration. . .," Symposium on Commercial Arbitration, Wake Forest Law Review, Winston-Salem, NC, March, 1996; "Hurdling Design-Build's Legislative and Regulatory Obstacles," Stanford University/Design Build Institute of America Annual Conference, San Francisco, CA, October, 1995; "Arbitration for the Transactional Attorney," ABA Real Property Section, ABA Annual Meeting, Chicago, IL, August, 1995. This June, Professor Stipanowich will address the Argentine Chamber of Constructions in Buenos Aires.

Richard H. Underwood, Spears-Gilbert Professor of Law, published three law review articles in 1996 which he plans to include in a book on perjury. The articles were "Logic and the Common Law Trial" in 18 Am. J. Trial Advoc. 151-199; "X-Spurt Witnesses," in 19 Am. J. Trial Advoc. 344-409; and "A Perjury Anthology," in Arizona J. Int'l and Comp. L. _____. In April and May, Professor Underwood provided CLE instruction at the Corporate Counsel Annual program; lectured at the UK Medical School on "Dirty Tricks" in litigation; hosted the KBA Ethics and Hotline Committee Retreat at Shakertown; and participated in KBA Board discussions of practice in the LLP/LLC form. Professor Underwood attended the June course for Health Law teachers at the Cleveland Clinic, where he presented a paper on genetics, genetic testing, and genetic discrimination. In October he will speak on the subject of "Managed Care and Legal Aspects of Ethical Care" for the Good Samaritan Foundation. This summer he is working on an Evidence book for the Anderson Publishing Co. Professor Underwood continues to serve as the Chairman of the Ethics and Unauthorized Practice Committees of the KBA.

Harold R. Weinberg, Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs Professor of Law, published "Tort Claims as Collateral: Impact on Consumer Finance" in 49 Consumer Finance Law Quarterly Report 155 (1996). He wrote an analysis of the interaction between Kentucky's certificate of title law and Article Nine (Secured Transactions) of the U.C.C. for the ABA Task Force on Certificate of Title Laws. He presented his computer tutorial entitled "Documents of Title Under Article Seven of the U.C.C." in a College of Law Randall-Park Colloquium concerning computer technology and legal education. Professor Weinberg was presented the 1996 Robert M. & Joanne K. Duncan Faculty Improvement Award at the Law Alumni Association's Awards Banquet in June.

Sarah N. Welling, Wendell H. Ford Professor of Law, spent the spring 1996 semester as a Visiting Professor at William & Mary Law School. She is continuing work on her treatise on Federal Criminal Law for West Publishing.

EMPLOYMENT SURVEY RESULTS

The Career Services Office of the University of Kentucky College of Law tracks employment and salary information from its law school graduates on an annual basis. This information is used to assist current students and alumni with job searches and hiring decisions.

Favorable National Rankings The information received is also reported to the National Association for Law Placement and U.S. News & World Report. The rankings by U.S. News and World Report based on the Class of 1995 data were very favorable. Of the 178 private and public accredited law schools which were surveyed, UK was assigned a Placement Success Rank of 40 and an Overall Rank of 56!

Salary Survey The salary information gathered by the law school is used to compile the annual Salary Survey for recent graduates. Starting salary information is broken down by geographic area, size of firm, and type of employer. Alumni who are interested in receiving a copy of the salary survey should contact the Career Services Office.

SBA CONTINUES TRADITION OF EXCELLENCE

The Student Bar Association at the College of Law was recognized once again for its efforts at the annual ABA convention in Chicago last year. UK's SBA won top honors in the Midwest region and placed in the top seven nationwide.

The award continues a string of such honors earned by the SBA; this year's group was also recognized by UK as the top graduate-level community service organization on campus.

SBA projects for the year included the Barristers' Ball, the Libel Show, the Cardozo Golf Open, and the Race Judicata Fun Run. 1994-95 also saw a dramatic increase in Pro Bono work, strong community service programs, the "Dean for a Day" event, and unprecedented intramural success for law school sports teams.

"It's great to have our work recognized on a national level," said SBA President and new graduate Dan Laren '96. "There are a lot of law schools out there with bigger budgets, larger student bodies, and more opportunities than we have here in Lexington. Still, we had a lot of hard work done by some very motivated and dedicated people, and the cream seems to keep rising to the top!"

There are over 170 student bar associations at ABA accredited law schools throughout the country.

BLACK LAW STUDENTS HOST FIRST AFRICAN-AMERICAN RECEPTION

The Boone Faculty Center on the UK Campus was the scene on February 23 as the Black Law Students Association (BLSA) sponsored the first African-American Graduate and Professional Student Reception.

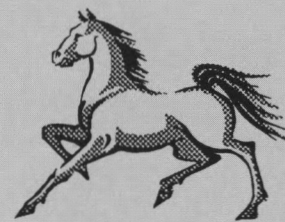

UK President Charles Wethington, Jr. attended the reception along with more than 70 African-American students and faculty from across campus, including the Medical Center complex.

The reception was organized as a response to a perception that African-American graduate students and professional students are socially isolated," said Sadiqa Moore '96, then President of BLSA.

The reception was sponsored by the UK College of Law, the UK Office of Minority Affairs and the Medical Center Office of Minority Affairs.

Assistant Professor Darlene Goring, Ollen Hinnant, Jr. '55 and UK Vice President of Graduate Studies and Research Dr. Gerald Bramwell What's New?

The College of Law's newest student organization is The Equine Law Society. Organized in the fall of 1995, it has rapidly gained an active membership and has hosted several speakers on various aspects of equine law practice.

Associate Dean Todd Eberle serves as faculty advisor to the organization and the group is working with the College of Law's curriculum committee to explore the possibility of offering a course or seminar in the upcoming academic year.

An article by Peter C. Brown '96, entitled "Blowing the Lid Off 'Pandora's Box': A Look at the Effect of the Design-Build Contract on the Government Contractor Defense" will be published in the July issue of The Construction Lawyer, the journal of the 5,400 member American Bar Association Forum on the Construction Industry. The article was an entry in the 1995 Forum Student Writing Competition. This summer, Mr. Brown joins the law firm of Smith, Currie & Hancock in Atlanta, GA, a nationally known construction firm led by managing partner, Luther House '57.

UK LAW PLAYS HOST TO LAW REVIEWS

The Kentucky Law Journal and the Journal of Natural Resources and Environmental Law of the UK College of Law hosted the National Conference of Law Reviews (NCLR) on March 13-17, 1996. The 1995 General Assembly of the NCLR elected UK as the host for the first time in its 42-year history.

The NCLR typically draws 80 to 100 law reviews and 200-250 law review editors annually. This year's Conference was attended by a record 107 law reviews from all across the nation including California, Oregon, Texas, North Dakota and Florida. Reviews sent from one to nine delegates who were editor-in-chiefs, managing and executive editors and various note/article editors.

The Conference was chaired by then third-year law student Susan Maines '96, a member of the Kentucky Law Journal. Faculty advisors Doug Michael and Carolyn Bratt were instrumental in bringing the Conference to UK and in its successful staging.

Over the five-day Conference, delegates attended panels of both legal scholars in the profession of law and outgoing student editors. The panels were geared toward accomplishing the general purpose of the NCLR: To provide training sessions geared toward helping its members to better serve both the academic and legal communities. The professional panels included the topics of copyright issues in conjunction with law reviews and author/editor relations. Panelists were law professors from Yale, William and Mary, George Washington and Boston Universities.

Keynote speakers for the Conference included Federal District Judge Jennifer B. Coffman '78 and Yale University Professor of Law, Ahkil Amar.

Sponsors of the conference included Lexis-Nexis, West Publishing, Joe Christensen, Inc., Darby Printing Co., Western Newspaper Publishing Co., Boehl Stopher & Graves, Stites & Harbison, Frost & Jacobs, Greenebaum Doll & McDonald and the UK College of Law.

COMMENCEMENT 1996

On the morning of May 4, 1996, a beautiful Derby Day, the College of Law held its 87th Commencement Ceremonies in the concert hall of the UK Singletary Center for the Arts. Of the 140 students in the graduating class, 128 attended the ceremony, and their friends and relatives filled the hall to capacity.

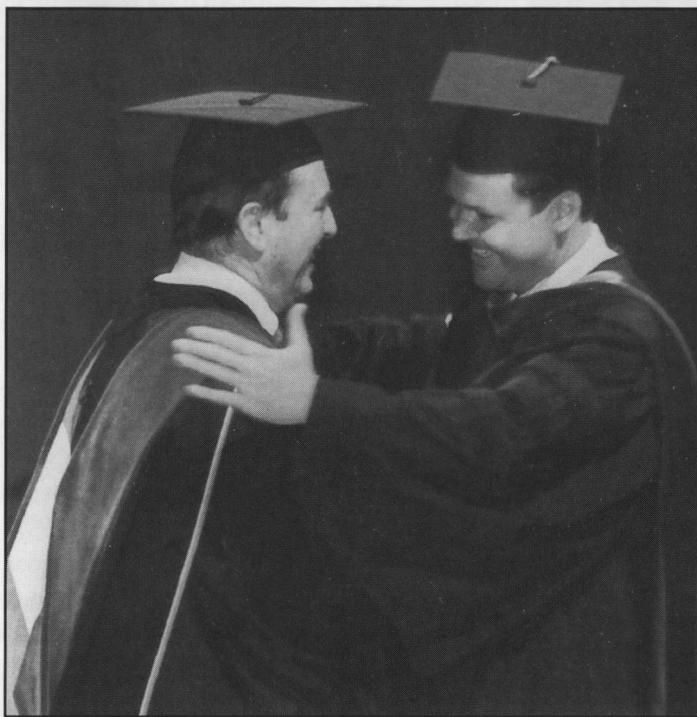

After the processional across the stage, Dean David Shipley congratulated not only the graduates but their parents, spouses, children, grandparents and in-laws in the audience, who also had endured much during the graduates' three years of law school. He then introduced the four speakers for the event: UK President Charles Wethington, speaking on behalf of the University; Melanie Kilpatrick, speaking on behalf of the graduating class; Professor Rutheford B "Biff" Campbell '69, chosen by the class to speak on behalf of the faculty; and Marcia Milby Ridings '76, then President of the KBA, speaking on behalf of the bar.

President Wethington congratulated the graduates on behalf of the University and congratulated their parents as well. The President is a member of that group: his son, Kennan, graduated that day as part of the College of Law's Class of '96. He will begin his legal career with Stites & Harbison in the firm's Lexington office.

The person who finishes first in the graduating class traditionally speaks at the graduation ceremony on behalf of that class. Melanie J. Kilpatrick, from Corbin, Kentucky, a graduate of the University of Virginia, was this year's speaker. During her years at the College of Law, she consistently finished at the top of her class and earned the Greenebaum Doll & McDonald Award for Academic Excellence, a tuition scholarship, for each of her second and third years of law school. Ms. Kilpatrick will begin her legal career as judicial law clerk to the Honorable Eugene E. Siler, Jr. of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit. She reminded her classmates of the important friendships they had made during law school and encouraged the graduates to stay in touch with one another.

The Class of '96 chose as its faculty speaker former dean and Alumni Professor of Law Rutheford B

UK President Charles Wethington congratulates his son, Kennan, upon his graduation from UK Law.

"Biff" Campbell, Jr., who taught many members of the class in business associations and securities law. Professor Campbell gave a humorous presentation of the achievements of his deanship (including the elimination of all jaywalking across Limestone Street to the law school) and then, on a serious note, spoke about the important roles lawyers can play in the fabric of society.

Marcia Milby Ridings, President of the Kentucky Bar Association, then addressed the graduates on behalf of the bar. She spoke about the need for attorneys to continue to serve as civic leaders, and encouraged the graduates to be active in their communities and in their state and local bar associations.

After the speakers Dean Shipley announced those members of the graduating class then eligible for the prestigious Order of the Coif based upon their current GPAs. The following students, who at the end of the fall 1995 semester were in the top 10% of their class, stood to applause:

Rhonda Jennings Blackburn,

Each year the UK College of Law faculty presents its highest tribute to a graduating student in the form of an engraved sterling silver julep cup. The Faculty Cup is presented to that student whose endeavors, both in and out of the classroom, have made the greatest contribution to the law school, making it a more interesting place in which to teach and a more pleasant place for faculty and students alike. The faculty votes by secret ballot, the results of which are known only to the dean until the announcement at graduation. The recipient of the Faculty Cup for 1996, who received the award to a standing ovation and cheers from his classmates, is Braxton Crenshaw of Glasgow.

A non-traditional student, Braxton Crenshaw is a graduate of UK's College of Business and Economics who majored in marketing. While in law school he was active in a number of organizations, including the Black Law Students' Association and the Student Bar Association. He was elected Vice President of the Student Bar Association in his second year. His brother, Jesse Crenshaw, is a 1974 graduate of the College of Law and a well-known Lexington practitioner. The faculty members who nominated him for the Faculty Cup describe Mr. Crenshaw as, "An extraordinary addition to the law school community, active in student government and activities, collegial and polite, a conscientious student who is always prepared for class and who actively participates," and "A mature, engaging person who has encouraged other students to fully participate in the law school."

For the presentation of degrees, the graduates were announced by Associate Dean and H. Wendell Cherry Professor of Law Eugene Gaetke. Each graduate then walked the length of the stage to shake hands with President Wethington and receive the scroll symbolic of the JD degree from Dean Shipley. Following the presentation of the degree certificates, Dean Shipley spoke about the importance to him of the Class of 1996, who came to the College of Law the same year that he started his deanship. He reminded the class of his now-famous "fire and brimstone" speech at their orientation, where he told them (incorrectly, as it turns out) that their days of drinking at Two Keys were over.

Afterwards, the faculty and new law graduates formed a recessional, ending outside in the sunlight for formal and informal photographs of the occasion.
